The next year was somewhat interrupted by the failing health of the appointed preacher, Rev. Ira M. Bidwell. He came from Provincetown Cen- tre Church, having had two very successful years with that people. He says, I really broke down at Provincetown, but had to stop at Wellfleet. He was so completely worn out, that Rev. Horace Moulton came on to finish out the year. There was no special interest. The church kept along with some degree of life, but not so much as at some other seasons. Father Bidwell was converted in 1820, at seventeen years of age, under the labors of Rev. John N. Maffitt; and then united with the Methodist Episcopal Church in Hartford, Conn. In 1823 he was licensed as a local preacher, and the following year joined the Conference. On his first circuit, with two other brethren, there were thirteen appointments; and on all his fields of labor he worked hard in the name of the Lord. Since 1840, with the exception of one year, he has held a superannuated relation in the Providence Conference, preaching two or three years under the presiding elder, and occasionally when not thus employed. For the last four years he has been too feeble to do any ministerial work. God gave him many souls in the years of his service; and now he writes, I am resting in hope, and trusting the Lord for a glorious immortality....
